

Religious Studies is Online and Ready for Summer!

RS 400: Religious Studies for Leadership in Practice

New and Online for Summer Term: May 28–June 23, 2019

Instructor: Michael Naparstek

Looking to apply Religious Studies to make a difference?
Looking for credits this summer with the flexibility of an online course?
Ready to be a leader and put your training to the test?

Religious Studies for Leadership in Practice is a brand-new course offering designed to apply the theories and methods of Religious Studies to real-world conflicts. This course will look at several case studies on the local, national, and global level—from kosher meals in Wisconsin prisons to flooding tombs from the Three Gorges Dam in China—to ask the question of how a critical understanding of religion would result in better decisions. It provides students with “conceptual toolbox” to analyze actual cases to ask better questions about how the social, environmental, and practical aspects of religion can inform new leaders in all fields to build bridges and make meaningful interventions. No prerequisites required. Fully Online. Three credits.